SYNOPSIS

The duty of the Superintending Officer (SO) is burdensome and he must act fairly in any certification, inclusive of certifying Time Extensions. He is faced with a barrage of consideration in respect of time extensions and the claim for loss and expense. Amongst the events are force majeure; adverse weather; events under insurance contingencies (eg. fire, storm, tempest, lighting, flood, earthquakes, aircraft or things dropped therefrom, aerial objects, riot, commotion); civil commotion, strike or lock-out; S.O.'s instructions; late instructions; NSC or nominated supplier's delay; delay by artist, tradesmen; delay in material supplied by Employer; opening up work for testing and inspection; act of prevention; and other grounds. The issues of giving of notice and details will affect the contractor's entitlement to EOT. What constitutes notice? If the contractor's delay overlaps with EOT events, what is his entitlement? Can S.O. grant EOT after date of completion has passed? The claim on loss and expense will also be discussed.
