SYNOPSIS

High speed broadband has joined running water, gas and electricity as a necessity in housing developments – it has become the fourth utility.

Applications delivered by Fibre-to-the-Home infrastructure using high speed broadband such as video-on-demand, high definition TV, gaming, home security, telecommuting, movie downloads, video-conferencing, sophisticated telephone service and more are all now in high demand – mainly fuelled by the advent and adoption of optical fibre.

Blown Fibre solution reduces both installation and ongoing costs – ducts and tube bundles can be laid in preparation for fibre, which is blown into the ducts to supply service only when needed.

Open Access Network (OAN) is a relatively new concept to property developers in Malaysia. Thus, we strive to educate developers on the benefits of deploying open access network and the value it can offer to a potential tenant and home owner whenever this solution is adopted in their new property development.

During this presentation, we will share our experience on deployment of fibre to-the home project based on Open Access Network (OAN) solution with major property developers in Malaysia for their high-rise condominium and landed property projects.
