SYNOPSIS

In its race to becoming develop country by year 2020, Malaysia has embarked into Public Private Partnership initiative as an alternative for smart partnership with the readily available experts in construction business. It was reported that one of the significant outcome is that, the mechanism has expedited the tedious process of providing the infrastructure and public facilities for use in time. The high-performance consultant and contractor has directly contributed to the development agenda of the country at optimum cost. From the 830 projects carried out under PPP initiative, Malaysia government able to save cost amounted to RM 222.9 billion (Bernama.com Friday, 14 October 2016). This seminar is going to share the fundamental knowledge on Public Private Partnership model in construction business. The content cover PPP framework, scope of work and the expected level of expertise of the people involved. At the end of the lecture there will be a sharing session of best practices and experiences.
