SYNOPSIS

Do you think or feel entrapped by the challenge of being a mice in someone else’s cheese cave with no control on the movement of the cheese? How can one solve this?

Strategic problem solving is about identifying the underlying issues that roots a problem to surface. Many times, the underlying issues are overlooked and the prolonged time taken to overcome them could result in many unexpected circumstance of events that can affect the wellbeing at an individual and organizational level.

This lab session is specially designed to identify internal abilities one could leverage on to identify the underlying issues that roots any problem encountered with by creating a set of new circumstances and realities from within. Would you like to discover how you can move your own cheese and instantly develop your own strategic problem solving method? We welcome all suggestions for questions/topics to be discussed during the forum that you think is relevant to the theme. Please e-mail your suggestions roselein@iem.org.my
