SYNOPSIS

Environmental engineering has been facing tremendous encounters for centuries in sustaining our earth. Sustainable development for many eyes are just a myth. How can one develop without depleting the environment? At a glance, this could be true. However we need to manage it. That would be the environmental engineering challenges. Environmental is a stand-alone word but it comprises many disciplines. To name some at macro levels are town planning, architectural, transportation, pollution control and materials of science. Here in this pre AGM talk the speaker shall cover the environmental challenges, some of the government initiatives and global movements in the sustainable development.
