SYNOPSIS

Since the Piper Alpha disaster in July 1988, Safety Management has become a priority for Shell and others in the Oil and Gas industry. Undoubtedly Safety Management, which relies on tools, processes and procedures, is responsible for a step change in the safety performance improvement of the Oil and Gas industry. Yet the industry still experienced major safety incidents. The pursuit of Goal Zero – “No harm and No Leaks” appears to be an elusive dream for the industry. Some companies such as Shell turn to Personal Safety Leadership to compliment

Safety Management. While Safety Management demonstrates a focus on encouraging open communication and reward good

SPEAKER

Upstream Mergers & Acquisitions, Asset Management for Shell Non-Operated ventures and Transformation. Simon first joined Sarawak Shell Bhd in 1979 and retired from Shell in Sep 2017. During his 38 years career with Shell, Simon has served in Australia, The Netherlands and Canada, in addition to Malaysia.

Prior to retiring from the Royal Dutch Shell and joining Petra Energy Bhd, Simon was the MD of Shell Global Solutions (Malaysia) Sdn Bhd as well as the VP/GM of Projects in the East. He is the first Malaysian to have been appointed to these senior roles.

In recognition of his contribution to the Malaysian Oil and Gas industry and in particular his effort in helping PETRONAS develop a Deepwater Hub in Malaysia, the Offshore Technology Conference, Asia, (OTC-A) awarded Simon the Distinguished Achievement Award in 2018. He is the first Malaysian to have been accorded such an honour. The OTC is the world’s largest Oil and Gas Conference.

During the construction of the Gumusut Kakap Floating Production System, Simon’s has had an emotionally challenged experience which changed his approach to Safety. It is in this context that Simon has agreed to share his experience and approach to Safety.
