SYNOPSIS

The real estate industry is a very old industry in Malaysia, previously operated by businessmen. It has since evolved over the years and the current trend is the business is run by professionals, including engineers. This industry has contributed RM56.7b in 2023 GDP of the country and since it has a wide coverage of the social and economic aspects of the nation, it has become well regulated by the Government from the areas of engineering and construction, planning, policies and inevitably the sustainability agenda to align with the Government target of achieving zero carbon emission by 2050. This talk dwells with the various challenges faced by the real estate industry and how it navigates itself and yet stay relevant to nation building
