SYNOPSIS

In the current environment, projects are found everywhere and the success rates are quite unclear as most outcomes of projects are not reported to the general public. Those that do, indicates cost overruns, time overruns and scope overruns. These are the tell tale of project management failure. The root cause and actual reasons for such failure need to be scrutinized and weeded out. Among the reasons or cause of project failure is the project management team itself and this is a human issue. Leadership is a age old competency that have survived through the test of time to be the cornerstone of success in many ventures including project management. Also true is the team that supports the project management. In this talk the speaker First Admiral Dato’ Ir Ahmad Murad b Omar (Rtd) have had numerous experience in his days serving the Royal Malaysian Navy and as a consulting marine engineer in projects after his retirement.
