Synopsis

Writing is a personal symbol with a rhythm and form level which is individualistic. It is in accordance with all other means of expression of personality, movements and speech. It is ruled by our brain and is often referred to as "brain writing". As no two people can be identical, different people have different writing and different personality type. Handwriting is more specific and is frozen in the time when we pen down onto the piece of paper.

It is well accepted that communication is important in leadership, upper level management and cooperation. This 1-days intensive program, specially designed for engineers and technical personnel, will equip you with the essential handwriting analysis skill that will provide you with an additional tool to understand the people around you and how you can better communicate with them. It will provide you some insights into identifying traits to look out for in leaders that will help you in selection of team members in your project. There will also be ample working exercises, examples, case studies and group discussions that will bring you to the journey of self-discovery as well as to unveil what is written between the lines and acquire this confident asset to communicate effectively with the people around you. Besides that, this additional skill will help you in your recruitment and selection of team leaders and members, particularly those who work largely in technical and management disciplines.
